Cache County historically has been driven by production, processing, and distribution of agricultural products. It has a substantial dairy and meat products industry. Utah State University is an economic bulwork of the area, employing about 6,000. USU's research activity has spawned many companies that have added jobs. Employment continues to grow in a diversifying economy. Expanding population has stimulated more construction activity. In the current market environment Cache County is slowing but maintains a healthy economic posture.
